If you have any problems with the installation process, you can download the application here. Questions 1: A new account with the password 'help' is created in the database. Can you log in to the account and list all the tables in the database? 2: Can you download and import.xls file using Microsoft Excel? Answers 1: The login/password used for the table is "help". The table can be viewed from the database using the following query. SELECT * FROM Users WHERE Username = 'help' 2: If you use Microsoft Excel as an import/export tool, it requires you to set the connection to the database. Connect to the database using the IP Address or host name, click on "Tools" on the top of the screen, then "Connect to Data Source". I can not download and import a file into Microsoft Excel that has double quotes in the name (such as "C:\Users\UserName\Desktop\ValuePairs.xls"), it doesn't import into Excel and when I try to open a file from a network drive I get the message "Access Denied". When I look at the file properties, the Windows flag is set to do not allow the file to be opened. Is this behavior by design or is there something else I need to do to get Excel to recognize the file and open? Answers 1:The double quotes are used to denote single-quotes in your filename. I have not checked the content of the file. There might be some text with single quotes. 2:Can you open the file on the desktop and open it manually? 3:If you check the properties, you will notice that the Access Denied error message appears because it is not recognized as an Access database file. This means that
